

Virtual Workshop

by the

Friends of the National Library of Medicine (FNL M)

October 28, 2020; 11am - 1pm U.S. EDT

Agenda is on the FNL M website.

Changing Publication Practices in the COVID-19 Era

Acceleration of impactful scientific results dissemination is greatly needed with the COVID-19 pandemic. Hear from leading experts who will discuss the latest trends of releasing acceptable and effective scientific results through a variety of publication types, related research data, and preprints.

The experts' messages will benefit principal investigators, research laboratory leaders, researchers, librarians, journal editors, as well as users of biomedical research discoveries.

Workshop objectives include:

1. How to meet NIH expectations for research productivity most effectively
2. The latest trends of acceptable and effective scientific publication
3. Where and how can research data be stored for reuse
4. The latest electronic research dissemination services and resources

PROGRAM

Wednesday, October 28, 2020 (times are U.S. EDT)

	Time	Session
	11:00 AM	Welcome and introductions
	11:05 AM	Plenary: NIH expectations for publication of research results Michael Lauer, Deputy Director for Extramural Research, NIH (confirmed)
	11:25 AM	Panel I: New developments in publication practices Moderator: Elaine Martin, MSLS, DA (Countway Library, Harvard University)
	12:05 PM	Break
	12:10 PM	Panel II: Data publication and preservation Moderator: Jean Shipman, MSLS, AHIP, FMLA
	12:50 PM	Closing comments

REGISTRATION

Visit the event page to access materials associated with this virtual workshop.

Details and Registration

Individual early registration: $35 (until September 30, 2020)

Individual registration: $65 (October 1-27, 2020)

One-time registration for the series (all three workshops): $95

Sponsorship Opportunities

A wide range of sponsorship opportunities are available to get your message in front of a large audience of researchers and library professionals. For details, email Ann Hill, Operations Manager, Friends of the National Library of Medicine: annhill@fnlm.org

About the FNLM Virtual Workshop Series

The Virtual Workshop Series from the Friends of the National Library of Medicine include the following events:

1. Changing Publication Practices in the COVID-19 Era - October 28, 2020
2. Real World Data and Electronic Health Records in Clinical Research – December 2, 2020
3. Artificial Intelligence to Accelerate Discovery - January 27, 2021

THANK YOU TO OUR SPONSORS

- Oxford PharmaGenesis Ltd (Workshop Series Sponsor)
- BMJ Publishing Group Ltd (Plenary Sponsor)